

CRIMINAL JUSTICE AND PUBLIC POLICY (CJPP)

Department of Sociology and Anthropology, and the Department of Political Science, College of Social and Applied Human Sciences

Criminal Justice and Public Policy (CJPP) is designed to provide students seeking a career in the criminal justice system, or planning to pursue an advanced degree, with a knowledge base that will enable them to pursue their career objectives. The program offers a unique blend of sociological courses dealing with the criminal justice system, as well as courses in Political Science dealing with public policy formation and implementation. It also provides students with the conceptual and methodological tools needed for further study.

Note: admission, including internal or external transfer, to the Criminal Justice and Public Policy minor has been suspended. For more information, please contact the CJPP Program.

Foundation Courses

Students who are admitted directly into the Criminal Justice & Public Policy major must meet an additional requirement to continue in the major. Students must achieve an overall average of 70% or better in the following foundation courses in order to continue in the major:

Code	Title	Credits
POLS*2300	Canadian Government and Politics	0.50
POLS*2350	Law from a Political Science Perspective	0.50
SOAN*2120	Introductory Methods	0.50
SOC*1500	Crime and Criminal Justice	0.50
SOC*2700	Criminological Theory	0.50
POLS*2230	Public Policy	0.50
or POLS*2250	Public Administration and Governance

Students are encouraged to complete the foundation courses in their first 10.00 credits of study.

Students with an overall GPA less than 70% after their first year of study (or 5.00 credits) will be invited to meet with a CJPP advisor for academic counselling.

Students with a minimum overall average of 70% in the six foundation courses will be guaranteed continuation in this major. Students with an overall average below 70% in the six foundation courses will be transferred to the BA (General) program. Students may subsequently transfer to another BA (General) Area of Concentration of their choice or the BA (Honours) program. Students are advised to meet with the BA Counselling Office for further support on transfer within the BA program.

Students who wish to declare the CJPP major may apply once after having completed the six foundation courses above. Students must apply directly to the program (cjpp@uoguelph.ca) by June 1. Admission to the specialization will be based on the average in the six foundation courses. Acceptance will be competitive based on available spaces, which will vary from year to year. Students with an overall average below 70% in the six foundation courses will not be considered for admission to the major. All decisions will be made at the end of June.

Students from other institutions who transfer to the University of Guelph and wish to declare the CJPP major must also meet the above requirements. If external transfer students are granted credit for one or more of the foundation courses listed above, then they must attain an overall average of 70% or better in the remaining required CJPP foundation courses.

In order to be considered for the Co-op program in Criminal Justice & Public Policy, applicants and transfers must meet the requirements for the Criminal Justice & Public Policy Major (BAH.CJPP).

Students who are interested in transferring into the Co-op program in Criminal Justice & Public Policy should contact the CJPP Program to inquire.

Major Learning Outcomes

Graduates of the Bachelor of Arts in Criminal Justice and Public Policy program will demonstrate the ability to:

- Understand the development and functions of major criminal justice institutions (e.g., police, courts, corrections) and the alternatives to the formal system, the activities of actors within these institutions, and how they relate to one another within the broader social, political, and economic world.
