

SOCIAL PRACTICE (SOPR)

SOPR*6000 Social Practice and Transformational Change Fall Only [0.50]

Students build foundational knowledge of social practice as related to the six SOPR program pillars through critically and creatively reflecting on inter- and transdisciplinary theories, concepts and systems of social practice and transformational change. Students develop and analyze social change processes and the factors leading to robust, sustained and transformational change. This course also develops relevant professional and academic skills.

Restriction(s): Restricted to Social Practice students

Department(s): Dean's Office, College of Social and Applied Human Sciences

Location(s): Guelph

SOPR*6100 Research and Social Practice Fall Only [0.50]

Students build upon core concepts explored in SOPR*6000 (Social Practice and Transformational Change) moving beyond analysis and discussion of scholarly contributions, into research, practice knowledge and skills related to externally identified questions and community needs. This course may involve working with or as a community practitioner.

Prerequisite(s): SOPR*6000, SOPR*6200

Restriction(s): Restricted to Social Practice students

Department(s): Dean's Office, College of Social and Applied Human Sciences

Location(s): Guelph

SOPR*6200 Methodologies Lab Winter Only [0.50]

Students treat methodology as critical research design connected to epistemology and ontology, investigating what counts as knowledge, as data and scholarship, the role of the researcher, issues of representation, and the implications of these for research.

Restriction(s): Restricted to Social Practice students

Department(s): Dean's Office, College of Social and Applied Human Sciences

Location(s): Guelph