

JUSTICE AND LEGAL STUDIES (JLS)

Department of Political Science, College of Social and Applied Human Sciences

The Bachelor of Arts in Justice and Legal Studies provides students with a clear understanding of law and judicial processes in Canada and a global context and allows students to critically evaluate, using various and interdisciplinary conceptions of justice, the relationship between legal institutions, society, politics, and governance.

The core of the Justice and Legal Studies Major draws on work in law and politics, socio-legal studies, political science and other disciplinary traditions to provide students with a practical understanding of the operation of law and legal institutions in both a local and global context. It also encourages students to evaluate how law and legal institutions impact, shape, and are shaped by actors and power dynamics in government and society.

The Areas of Emphasis allow students to study law, justice and legal institutions in various interdisciplinary contexts. Five Areas of Emphasis are available:

1. Canadian Politics and Governance
2. Global Relations and Governance
3. Gender and Sexuality
4. Arts and Humanities
5. Business and Management

Students are expected to choose their Area of Emphasis by the end of the third semester.

A limited number of spots will be available on a competitive basis to students who were not admitted directly into the Justice and Legal Studies major from high school. Students who wish to be considered for transfer into JLS must apply directly to the Department of Political Science at the end of their second semester. To be eligible for a possible transfer after first year, applicants must have an overall GPA of at least 70% (minimum of 4.00 credits) and have successfully completed one of JLS*1000 Introduction to Justice & Law, ANTH*1150 Introduction to Anthropology, or SOC*1100 Sociology with a 70% GPA in the course. Students will be informed of the transfer decision by June.

Major Learning Outcomes

Graduates of the Bachelor of Arts in Justice and Legal Studies program will demonstrate the ability to:

- Evaluate how law and legal institutions impact, shape and are shaped by actors and power dynamics in government and society.
- Examine the contested relationship between law and politics in domestic and international contexts.
- Conduct research using appropriate social science methodologies to investigate the relationship between law and legal processes in politics and society.
- Describe “legal reasoning” and evaluate debates about whether and how it differs from “ordinary reasoning” and comparing to other non-legal ways of thinking in other disciplines.

- Reflect critically on how legal reasoning may influence how actors frame issues and make decisions within legal, political, and other governance forums and critically assess the consequences.
- Find, gather and evaluate judicial decisions, statutes, and regulations both domestically and internationally.
- Identify the central institutions and processes of government, the legal system, policy making and civic engagement in Canada and establish how they relate to one another as well as the broader social, political, and economic world.
- Reflect critically on the differences in legal processes and systems within and between Canada and different jurisdictions.
- Critically examine key ethical demands and tensions inherent in legal and judicial processes and systems and identify their moral and cultural foundations, both domestically and internationally.
- Communicate effectively in written and oral forms, with the accurate usage of key legal concepts and terminology where appropriate and in conjunction with concepts and terminology in other disciplines.
- Develop an interdisciplinary understanding of law and justice and gain a core understanding of the context in which law and legal institutions operate.
